WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW ABOUT EMPLOYMENT

Disclosing your Criminal Record To An Employer

Answer this question in three parts:

Explain briefly your conviction-example: I was arrested for drug possession. This occurred during a very immature time in life. I now have direction, goals, and responsibilities that take priority over negatives like drugs.

Explain what you did to change your life while incarcerated: During the time I was incarcerated, I realized that I needed to incorporate change into my life. I did this by educating myself, focusing on my rehabilitation through participation in therapeutic groups, and using inmate employment to help in my transition to working in the community.

Explain what you will do to ensure that relapse will not occur: Because of the difficult times I've faced, I have positively changed my life. By conquering my weaknesses and helping others I have accelerated my healing process. I believe that meaningful employment, maintaining meaningful employment, and staying chemically free, will continue to help this healing process.

Do's and Don'ts

- Do let your prospective employer know that you take responsibility for your offense
- Do maintain your pride no matter what the offense
- Do practice answering these types of questions in a mock interview or aloud to yourself
- Do not set yourself up to fail when disclosing your criminal record. Make sure your target job is not related to your offense
- Do not make excuses or place blame
- Do not go into graphic detail of your offense
- Do not lie, deceive or be dishonest

Applications

- Many employers require you to fill out their application form. Since there is no single, standard form, it is helpful if you have on-hand your prior employment information (such as: where you worked, when, and job titles), former home addresses, etc. This will help you to complete the form quickly and accurately
- Follow the directions carefully. It can be helpful to read through the whole application before you start writing. This will help you avoid putting information (or too much information) in the wrong spaces
- Be neat, accurate, complete and write clearly
- Avoid negative words or statements
- Emphasize your skills and accomplishments
- Fill in every blank (unless it instructs you not to)
- If possible, use an erasable pen. If not, think through your response before you start writing.
- Also, if possible, try to speak to the person doing the hiring-but don't be pushy!
- Remember-applications are used to screen-out applicants as well as to screen them in. So, keep these guidelines in mind.

Steps to help assure good work attendance

1. Use a reliable alarm clock-and set it early enough
2. Plan and double-check your work schedule with the boss
3. Have reliable transportation
4. Use reliable childcare
5. Use a calendar
6. Call your employer immediately if it appears that you will be late-be honest, don't make inappropriate excuses
7. Don't abuse sick leave

General advice

- Be dependable & reliable
- Be prompt to appointments and for work
- Present yourself as a person you would want to employ
- Use good grooming and dress appropriately for the job
- Wear required safety equipment
- Do more than they expect of you
- Follow company policy carefully

“What You Need to Know About Employment” was taken from the “Community Reentry Workbook” prepared by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Department of Corrections. You can see the entire document at <http://www.cor.state.pa.us/> Then click on “Reentry” then on “Community Reentry” then on “Community Reentry Workbook”.
